R. Malcolm Errington's volume on treaties of the Graeco-Roman world from 200 BC to the beginning of the imperial period is a source book which brings together on 663 pages the complete historical sources on all the treaties between states that are preserved from the 2nd and 1st cent. BC. The volume follows on from its two predecessors in terms of form, but in addition to commentaries it offers a German translation of all literary and epigraphic texts. The historical content of all 216 treaties is made accessible via detailed indexes.

With the appearance of this volume, the series, directed by the Commission for Ancient History and Epigraphy of the German Archaeological institute, has now made available the totality of treaties of the Graeco-Roman world from the Archaic period to the beginning of the imperial period.

About the author:
R. Malcolm Errington is Professor Emeritus of Ancient History at the Philipps-Universität Marburg. A life-long research interest has been the history of the relationship of the Roman Republic with the late hellenistic Greek states, for which, among other themes, the present book offers a comprehensive collection of sources with explanatory commentary. He is a member of the German Archaeological Institute and lives in Berlin.
